Every culture has vegetarian dishes – whether by force or by design – and many have excelled at vegetarian cookery. Even cultures with heavy meat consumption have non-meat dishes – be it coleslaw, mashed potatoes, bread or just boiled beans. By cooking with only vegetables we ought not to feel we are limiting our choice of foods, but that we are expanding into an almost limitless variety of foodstuffs and dishes. Let's celebrate summer's early harvest with fresh vegetables that are available locally and with the amazing array we find in our grocery stores and supermarkets. By "vegetarian" we mean no red meats, poultry, fish or seafood.

This meal is dedicated to Ann and Don Fowler, vegetarians, who made key contributions to CHAA and to JBLCA. They passed away in 2009 and 2011, respectively.
